The image shows the interior of a large, multi-story wooden cabin. The walls and floors are made of light-colored wood. A prominent staircase with a wooden railing leads to an upper level. In the foreground, there is a large fireplace with a wooden mantel. To the right, a large window looks out onto a wooded area. The overall atmosphere is warm and rustic.

Although the authors do not explicitly state that the results were specific for their population, there is some evidence to suggest that the findings may be generalised beyond a specific population. The authors state that they measured the use of a specific service, not only within their population, but also in other populations, and that the results were consistent across all populations. They also state that the results were consistent across all populations, and that the results were consistent across all populations.
